Editor's Report:

Behind the Scene Facts

A young television fan, an energetic high school boy of 16, called us up last week and asked if we would answer a few questions. He had recently constructed his own tele-receiver from a kit given to him by his parents, and was naturally proud of it.

"Television is great," he told us, "but my family and I cannot understand some phases of it, especially the programming with all of its changes."

So, we took it upon ourselves to answer the interested youth, and his parents. We did it in the form of a trip through a Chicago television studio, and as questions were asked the answers unfolded as our party witnessed the hundreds and hundreds of motions, details and plans made and enacted to provide video entertainment.

Last minute changes in programming can be disappointing. The publishers of Television Forecast regret they occur; so do our daily Chicago newspapers who are experiencing similar difficulties what with printing deadlines necessary for any publication.

Most last minute changes in TV programs are not deliberately enacted by the studios. There have been instances where stations have planned a series of shows, announced them to the public, and then have chopped them off the screen without explanation. The result, naturally, is confusion to our readers who rely on accurate program listings in our magazine.

What we are about to say may be challenged, but we are going to let it stand:

Television, at present, is giving Chicago more in its early years than radio did in its first 15 years.

New shows sometimes last only a few weeks before they are found not adaptable to television, and just as important—they do not find support from interested sponsors.

Our switchboard has been swamped with phone calls from readers wondering why the pro football games are not being televised. As of this writing, the answer lies in the huge rates being asked for television rights to telecast such games. At first, pro football team officials wanted $10,000 a game; with no nibbles the rates were slashed to $5,000. Until some sponsor accepts these terms, video will be unable to present all mid-west games being staged here.

Because Television Forecast is in no way affiliated with any Chicago video station it is able to criticize imperfections in television and will continue to do so in a constructive manner. The result eventually will be better programming, and fewer last minute changes. We will continue to solicit the ideas of our readers, asking them for opinions on current shows, and suggestions for new shows.

JACK OWENS continues his cruising as a crooner on TV, climaxing his songs with such moments as the above. It's work, he claims! He's the star of "Jack Owens Sings" on WENR-TV 7:30 p.m. each Tuesday.

Kukla, Fran, Ollie Complete First Year

One year of television history. One year old October 13th!

If you heard fireworks going off, or if Halley's comet seemed to dip to earth on that day—it was only in honor of Kukla Fran and Ollie who celebrated their first anniversary on the video lanes of WBKB.

Kukla, who rivals Elsa Maxwell in the matter of handling important occasions, planned the gala birthday party.

One year ago on October 13, Kukla Fran and Ollie, with little fanfare, made their first appearance on WBKB. As planned then, the program was aimed at children. But adult reaction was so enthusiastic that WBKB's executive producer, Beulah Zachary and director Lou Gomavitz realized that they had in Burr Tillstrom's puppets and in Fran Allison's winsome personality that rare program combination that pleases all ages. Reports began to drift in that workmen were stopping off on the way home at neighborhood bistros just to see the show. Women requested that the show be scheduled later in the evening when they could devote full attention to it. Eventually, the time was changed.

Now, in its half hour form KFO have struck their stride in the 7-7:30 p.m. spot.

Playful Parrot Cuts Comic Capers

The parrot appearing on the Sun-Times Comic Capers over WBKB along with Bob McElroy and Handy Andy, Jr., is strictly on probation, director Ew Roden reports.

On the first audition of the show "Polly" refused to stay on her perch. She wandered down to the floor and behind a set where WBKB cameras could not catch her.

On the second audition she nipped a crew member's finger. The third time "Polly" literally "flew the coop." With a frightening flurry of wings, she flew up to the ceiling and remained there, haughty and aloof, for the remainder of the program.

Neither Bob McElroy nor Handy Andy, Jr., have any influence on the willful creature and anything can happen when the show is on the air. It is even possible, according to a whispered report, that if boys and girls do not behave, or stick their fingers too close to the television screen at home, "Polly" will fly through the glass and nip them!

On the Cover

"How a Director Feels Just Before a Show" is how we labeled this photo of Ed Roden. Roden should know, since he directs five WBKB shows. There is some dispute as to whether this was a posed picture.

Television Sells Sports To Fan

by PAUL FOGARTY

When the ball parks and stadia were invaded by radio in the early 1920's, some ball club owners, a few athletic directors and a sprinkling of sports promoters decided it was time to settle their affairs against the demise of sports as an audience spectacle. Their reasoning was simple, direct and to the point. Said they, "When people have but to turn a dial to hear an expert bring them a colorful and vivid picture of a football game or a baseball game or a prize fight, they'll never again leave the comforts of their homes to brave the elements, buck the traffic and fight elbow wielding crowds to see sports contests again." So—what happened?

More football stadia were built during the first ten years of football broadcasting than had been built in the entire pre-radio history of the game. In Chicago where five local stations broadcast the Cubs baseball games daily, that club in 1929 established an attendance record in a park that held less than forty thousand fans, that has taken the Yankees with an amphitheatre seating over seventy thousand, 18 years to surpass. What did radio do to boxing? Well, during that same period the largest crowd of all time saw the Dempsey-Tunney affair at Philadelphia. A few months later when the same battlers met again in Chicago, the largest purse of all time was recorded. What radio did to sports was good. Very good, pal, very good.

History Repeats

Is history repeating itself?

It looks that way. The same owners, directors and promoters, or a reasonable 1948 facsimile thereof, view the television invasion with alarm. Their reasoning is the same as their 1926 prototype—only more so. A few progressive purveyors of athletic entertainment, however, are looking at television through rose colored glasses. They see television as a medium for creating new fans. Individual athletic stars can be sold to the non-sport-minded fan in such a way that the video owner will want to actually see the star from a box seat as well as from a davenport hard by a TV set. This selling of baseball stars is now being done not only on pre-game television interview shows, but also, and with considerable success, in evening video shows.

New Feature

Beginning this week, Television Forecast will introduce a guest columnist. Each week some TV personality or newspaper critic will spin a story on Video Today. Their views will not necessarily be the opinion of this magazine.

Recently on Sportsman's Corner, WGN-TV's informal chit-chat show, Roy Smalley, Cub short-stop and Hal Jeffcoat, Cub centerfielder, did a big league job in selling themselves, ball players in general and the Cub organization in particular, by the manner in which they put over their homey little act.

Demonstrates Cooking Skill

Because Smalley has somewhat of a reputation as an amateur cook, the skit opened on a kitchen scene with the Cub short-stop in cook's regalia tossing flapjacks as both boys harmonized nicely about unrequited love in the Ozarks. Between cooking, songs, interviews, and good natured banter about their diamond exploits, the two lads hit the video jackpot with their thespian effort. What good did this do the Cubs ticket office? Just this: The day after the show hundreds of letters and phone calls attested to the fact that many people were going out to the Cub Park for the first time in their lives just to see Messrs. Smalley and Jeffcoat, "the cook and the tenor," play ball.

"WHAT'S WRONG WITH WOMEN?" Absolutely nothing, judging by the rapt expressions of these three cavaliers who appeared on WBKB recently to discuss the controversial article by Rudy Vallee in Esquire. Tony Basel at the mike seems to be lost in dreams of his own, while columnist Irv Kupcinet, restaurateur Ric Riccardo and publicist Jimmy Savage are happily distracted.

Basel: "French women are the best."

Kupcinet: "French women are lousy."

Savage: "All women talk too much, but the prettiest gals are from Dallas, Texas. Except for windy days on Michigan Boulevard when it looks to me as though all Chicago women are from Dallas."

Riccardo: "We need a set of bar manners established for women. There was a time when women asked permission to sit at a bar. Now they push the men aside and take up all the room."

Basel: "American women have too much money."

Riccardo: "I still want to see a set of bar manners established."

Savage: "Now you take South American women . . . I did. They have not been spoiled."

Basel: "French women are best."

Kupcinet: "French women are lousy."

Riccardo: "I still want to see . . . well, let me give you an example of what has happened. The other day a woman came in, pushed her way up to my bar and ordered drinks for everyone in the house. She paid, too! In fourteen years in the gentle business of light wines and sprits I have never seen that happen!"

Kupcinet: "Regarding women, I have only one motto. I wish it were mine, but I must confess it is not."

Savage: "Whose is it, Irving?"

Kupcinet: "Teddy Roosevelt's. 'Speak softly but carry a big stick!'"

Seriously, the four men agreed that women have come into their own as never before. They control the pocket-book of the nation, they have too much independence, and they are growing increasingly neurotic. So much so that they are making men neurotic!

Chinese Visitors Amazed By TV

A group of some eighty Chinese students, sent to this country to complete their educations by the National Catholic Welfare Conference of China, saw television for the first time when they recently visited WBKB.

Led by Rev. John T. S. Mao, the group attended a WBKB program, had their pictures taken and were breathless in their praise of the twentieth century's newest marvel.

"Television is a greater miracle than radio was in the twenties," said Rev. Mao. "It is impossible to describe the impact it made on these students from far off Nanking. For three days they were the guests of this hospitable city. They have seen all of Chicago's many wonders, but I know that television has made the greatest impression on them."

There is no television in China as yet, said Rev. Mao, and little prospect of it coming in the near future.

Vaudeville Clicks on TV

Vaudeville, far from being dead, is more alive than ever due to the impetus given it by television, according to Edward Sobol, NBC director-producer.

Sobol claims "Television enhances any variety program. In the old days, the intimacy so important to a variety program was lost in large theaters. With television we can put the act right in the lap of the audience."

Now the Duomar Lens!

A new lens is being introduced to television! Called the "Duomar," it differs from the Zoomar (now standard equipment on WGN-TV and WBKB) in that it has two fields of view. At present it is being used in Hollywood by the Don Lee TV studios.

Pre-Game Feature

A recommended appetizer for sports fans is served up by WBKB before each of its college and professional football games in the form of "Now I'll Tell One," a ten minute cartoon and chatter show featuring Jack Strasberg, syndicated cartoonist and Ned Becker, well known vaudeville artist.

Strasberg draws the cartoons while Becker fills in the details in his own inimitable way. "Now I'll Tell One" precedes home Notre Dame games at 1:35 p.m. and the Rockets home games at 8:17 p.m.

WTMJ-TV Joins ABC Network

WTMJ-TV, a Metropolitan class station in Milwaukee, Wis., recently affiliated with the American Broadcasting Company's television network. Owned by the Milwaukee Journal, WTMJ-TV began commercial television operations December 3, 1947 on Channel 3 and is now interconnected from Chicago with ABC's mid-Western television network.

Fogarty Writes . . .

Video Adds Fans

Television "Progressives" such as Phillip K. Wrigley, President and owner of the Chicago National League Baseball team, are carrying the video torch. They believe that televised ball games and all sport television shows, well done, will create new fans and new business. They also feel that even at its best, television will never take the place of a seat in the grandstand or the stadium, and to that all television people agree. There is no such thing as "just like being there," they say. Radio never supplanted a seat on the fifty yard line but it did send millions of new fans to the country's new stadia in quest of that favored seat. Television seems destined to do the same thing only in a bigger and quicker way. It's fast selling sport to "new people" and that after all is what makes new business.

"There was a time when she didn't have a friend—Now look! How Come?"

Editor's Report . . .

We have on many occasions referred to television as a young giant which is now undergoing many changes and improvements. Mechanically we are experiencing miracles in electronics—the improvements and perfections which raced ahead so fast it caught television-minded people off guard. Now, for a short time, we must allow former radio personnel and new people with new ideas to stage new productions, to recruit new talent, new faces for the most critical audience in the world—TV.

TV TOPICS—Harry C. Hempstead of Elgin wonders why midget auto racing is not a regular video feature. The answer is: auto racing is not a regular feature at Soldier Field. It has a season, which was fairly well covered by WBKB this year . . . One of the most interesting letters received to date comes from H. C. Spencer, director of technical drawing at Illinois Institute of Technology, who writes: "We are very enthusiastic over television. To us, it is truly the wonder of the age. Although the programs are often poor, we usually enjoy them anyhow. We like the informality. We enjoy seeing people act naturally, fumbling for ideas or ways to express ideas, making slips of the tongue and grammatical errors. We are fed up with the canned stuff given over the radio in elocution style" . . . He continues, "On the whole, we do not regard the average wrestling we see on TV as suitable to be brought into the home, though it may be just right in the saloon" . . . "We are surprised at the poor amateur talent attracted by the excellent prizes on the Knickerbocker show," he concludes . . . Mr. H. Sterling of Chicago wonders why a lack of programs exists in the afternoon hours . . . This is not an FCC rule, to scotch his guess, but a lack of sponsors to buy this time . . . It is believed with additional stations, and additional tele-receivers in the Chicago region, viewers will soon have as many video hours as we now find on radio.
